Contact Tracing

If you test positive, public health will call you to begin contact tracing. It is imperative that you answer, or that you return a call and are as acute as possible as to where you have been and who you have been in contact with. This allows public health to ensure they are reaching every close contact to slow and limit the spread of the virus. Public health relies heavily on this contact tracing interview. Public Health understands the initial diagnosis can be a shock, so you can always call back and add to the contact tracing list without any worry. We are here for you to help and support you through this difficult time. If you feel you were a close contact, you may also feel free to contact the Bad River Health Department.
