REMINDERS:

If you are waiting for a COVID-19 test result, you should quarantine yourself until that result is made available to you. You should also get ready in case someone from the health department calls to check on your health status, discuss who you've been around recently, and ask you to stay home to self-isolate (if you aren't already doing so). You may want to consider telling people who you have been around that they may have been exposed to COVID-19. Remember, if you answer the call, you can help to slow the spread.

REMEMBER TO GET YOUR FLU SHOT!
